FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE

An Important Communication from the United States Department of Agriculture.

The outbreak of foot and mouth disease has already affected an area so large that it is evident that most active measures are necessary to eradicate it. Cases have been found as far apart as Iowa and Massachusetts, and at the time of this writing (Nov. 10) 13 states have been quarantined—Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, Maryland, Iowa, Rhode Island, New Jersey, and Delaware. Interstate shipments of live stock from these states are absolutely prohibited, and such articles as hides, straw, hay, etc., must be thoroughly disinfected before they can be moved in interstate commerce. Both in virulence and in extent of area affected the present outbreak is more serious than any five previous ones which have occurred in the United States.

These previous outbreaks have not been sufficiently serious either to familiarize farmers with the symptoms of the disease or to render them fully alive to the losses that it occasions when permitted to gain a firm foothold. One of its most dangerous characteristics is its extreme contagiousness. Not only may it be conveyed directly from one animal to another, but it may be transported in fodder, picked up from the ground and carried over the country by cats, dogs, and chickens, or communicated through the agency of man. Cases have already been found in which it seems certain that the disease was spread by the curiosity of farmers to inspect suffering animals. They returned from these visits to communicate the disease to their own previously healthy herds.

The contagiousness of the disease explains the action of the Federal authorities in quarantining such large areas. The practice is to clap a blanket of quarantine on the State in which a case of the disease has been found, and then, by careful in-

New County Atlas Out.

The new Lafayette County Atlas is completed and has been delivered this week by parcel post to all subscribers. It is a complete work of its kind, well gotten up, printed on heavy stock and substantially bound. It shows every farm in the county with the number of acres, correct location and the owner's name. All public roads are given, rural routes, road districts, school districts, location of residences, school houses, churches, etc. The work is invaluable as a reference to every land owner and a copy should be in every school house in the county.

The work sells for $5.00. Only about 50 extra copies were published and no doubt these will soon be taken. In all probability it will be many years before another edition will be printed, so if you are not a subscriber to the work, send your order at once to Geo. Scott, Higginsville, Mo.

A FINE DEMONSTRATION

The Pin-Ton Gives Pure Foods a Lift in Lexington.

Friday afternoon and evening the Pin-Ton played host to the people of Lexington and surrounding country and at the same time demonstrated the palatableness of numerous articles of food, chief among which was the Ferndell line of preserved fruits and vegetables. This line, while practically a newcomer in Lexington, has made a reputation for excellence that assures an immense sale so long as its present quality is maintained.

The National Biscuit Company, "The Old Reliable," was very much in evidence, serving with a lavish hand, many dainties along with their staples.

The display of various articles of food was most complete, including sea foods, products of the dairy, the speciality manufacturer, the butcher, the baker, and the peanut butter maker. Besides the eats, there were cigars for the men, toy balloons for the children and roses and carnations for the ladies.

The affair was a fine success, and Mr. Wilmot is to be congratulated on his effort in "showing" the people of Lexington that everything good to eat may be found in our own little berg.

W. S. Marrs went to Kansas City Saturday to spend the day.

You ought to be thankful that you're a citizen of a nation that is not at war

You ought to get some comfort, in such times as these, by contrasting your good fortune in this respect with the sorrows of our fellowmen across the sea.

We should be thankful for prosperity, for bountiful crops; for our ability to help the homeless ones. We ought to be cheerful over our better lot.
